Dear Lilienthal Community,

This week we are celebrating Inclusive Schools Week along with other schools in the District. Inclusivity isn't something new to Lilienthal; our school was founded on the idea of equity for all students regardless of their background. That core tenant is still true today. We have a robust Special Education program that uses inclusive practices to keep diverse learners in our General Education classrooms. In addition to that, some of you may know that our school is also a Deaf and Hard of Hearing magnet for the District. In all this leads to about 10% of our students having identified learning differences. In all, our Special Education programs help make our school a more diverse place and allow our students the opportunity to learn from children who are different from them.

This week, we will talk about being inclusive with our students in Community Circles (K-5) and in Advisory (Middle School). We'll also have the opportunity for teachers to have Ms. Harmon and I read a book to their class. We'll also be hosting an Inclusive Schools Week Breakfast on Thursday at the Madison Campus. We'll start at 8:00 in the cafeteria with coffee and bagels. It will be a good opportunity to have a conversation with Ms. Harmon and me about inclusivity. I hope to see a good number of you there!

For more on Inclusive Schools Week, please see the official website. You can also find some great, kid-friendly, books to read with your children at home here. All the books deal with inclusivity and will give you a great starting point for talking about diversity with your kids at home.

In the end, Inclusive Schools Week is a good time for all the adults to think about how we're raising more empathetic, caring children. Children that will go on to be thoughtful leaders, caring community members, and empathetic listeners.

With an appreciation for our diverse community,
Tyler Graff

Principal, Claire Lilienthal
